Welcome to the Alaska Grown Source Book

Enclosed you will find the Alaska Grown Source Book organized by regions. Each region has a product index specific for that region. The farm listings are alphabetized by farm name. The book is in the following order:

- Statewide CSA Programs (Community Supported Agriculture)
- Statewide U-Pick
- By Region
  - Product Index, linking providers and products
  - Farm Listings are alphabetized by Farm Name
- Statewide Farmers Markets Listings (2010)
- Farmers' Resources – alphabetized by business name
- Agency Listings
- Farmer Index – organized by farmer's last name, including farm name, phone number and referencing page number.

Each region, South Central, Northern, Kenai Peninsula, Kodiak & South West, and Copper River & South East, is separated out, with individual product indexes for each region.

Please also note that we have used icons for easy identification. Not every product has an icon but the most commonly grown products do.

We hope you find this Source Book useful as you endeavor to become an active Alaska Grown buyer!

Letter from the Governor

THE OFFICE OF GOVERNOR SEAN PARNELL

Dear Alaskans,

As we become more conscious of what we eat and where and how our food is grown, it is important to know where to turn for fresh, local foods that will keep our families healthy for generations to come.

The Alaska Grown Source Book enables Alaskans to do just that. This guide provides information to find local products – whether it is meat and fresh produce for our dinner tables, milk so our children can have healthy and strong bones, hay for our livestock, or flowers and plants for our gardens.

This year I signed House Bill 70, the Farm to School bill, which is designed to increase consumption of Alaska Grown foods in both schools and State institutions. This bill encourages our children to eat better, stimulates growth in our economy, and helps to ensure that our Alaskan producers can continue to grow the local, healthy food that provides food security for Alaska.

In addition, I declared August 22-28 as Eat Local Challenge Week. This annual event challenges all Alaskans to support local producers by looking for products identified as Alaska Grown. The growth of farmers' markets in Alaska makes this goal a more attainable reality for Alaskans. Currently, 28 farmers markets around Alaska offer the best of what is local, in season, and fresh. These markets also connect our communities, providing us the opportunity to meet the local producers of sod, aquaculture, dairy, meat, and vegetables.

I encourage you to look for the Alaskan Grown symbol the next time you shop or dine out. As Alaskans, we commend our Alaskan farmers and processors for their efforts. We are grateful for their dedication to supplying high-quality, local product, and continue to enjoy the bounty of their harvest.

I encourage all Alaskans to "Look, Ask, and Buy" Alaska Grown!

Best regards,

Sean Parnell
Governor
