Extra $1 million available for Recreational Trail Program grants

(Anchorage, AK) – Recreational trail construction and maintenance efforts in Alaska could be bolstered by an additional $1 million this year, according to the Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation (DPOR).

Under its Recreational Trails Program (RTP), the division typically offers grants of about $1.2 million a year for trail work in Alaska, said Director Ricky Gease. Each $1 a grant recipient provides is matched by $9 from the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA). Eligible applicants include non-profits; educational institutions; Native corporations or tribal governments; and local, state and federal government agencies.

With additional FHWA money recently becoming available to the state, the division is currently accepting a second round of applications in 2021 for grants totaling approximately $1 million.

“This grant money will be doubly helpful in light of the COVID-19 pandemic,” Gease said. “Not only will it stimulate our economy with an additional $1 million dollars in spending, it will also support the trails so many Alaskans are using for relief from isolation and social distancing.”

The division is especially interested in using this year’s additional money to fund grants of up to $300,000 for projects supporting motorized uses, and up to $150,000 for non-motorized uses, Gease said. However, under the grant rules, projects supporting trail safety and education will not be eligible for this second round of grants.

Grant applications must be delivered to the division by 4 p.m., on Friday, April 30. Application packages are available at: <http://dnr.alaska.gov/parks/grants/trails.htm>.
