Alaskan Communities Awarded Funding to Mitigate Wildfire Risk

(Anchorage, AK) – A second round of funding from the US Forest Service’s Community Wildfire Defense Grant (CWDG) Program will support communities across Alaska through grants for creating Community Wildfire Protection Plans, planning efforts, or implementation totaling $3,759,337. Communities received priority for this program if they are a low-income area, recently impacted by disaster, or in a wildfire hazard location.

Several State of Alaska projects, via the Division of Forestry & Fire Protection, are being funded to develop current Community Wildfire Protection Plans:

- Planning funding for the Delta region ($250,000)
- Planning funding for the Tok region ($250,000)

“To support additional wildland fire mitigation in at-risk communities, the State of Alaska opted in to the CDWG program to allow local applicants the maximum resources and assistance from the Alaska Division of Forestry & Fire Protection,” said Norm McDonald, Deputy Director of Fire Protection. “The program aims to help communities effectively deal with wildfire risk and the division encourages eligible communities and organizations to take advantage of this funding opportunity and apply throughout the five-year program.”

Homer Electric Association will receive $2,630,474 for an implementation project.

Funding will also be awarded directly from the CWDG program to three successful Tribal applicants to create new Community Wildfire Protection Plans:

- Dillingham and Aleknagik: $250,000
- Nenana: $249,863
- Tetlin: $129,000

Around 500 applications were submitted for the highly competitive program’s second funding round, requesting a total of $965 million. Out of these projects, only 158 were selected from 31 different states, 11 Tribes and two territories for the available funding amount of $250 million.

The third round of funding will be announced in late summer 2024. For more information about the CWDG grants in Alaska, communities may visit <http://forestry.alaska.gov/fire/cwdgrants> or inquire directly for application instructions.

A total of $1 billion is available for the CWDG program over a five-year period through the Infrastructure and Jobs Act, Section 40803(f) that awards grants to at-risk communities to develop or revise a community wildfire protection plan; and carry out projects described in a CWPP that is not more than 10 years old. Individual grants will fund up to $250,000 to create and update community wildfire protection plans or conduct outreach and education, and up to $10 million for associated infrastructure and resilience projects.

The Department of Natural Resources' mission is to develop, conserve, and maximize the use of Alaska's natural resources consistent with the public interest.
